

Cotton: From the Field to your Family

Cotton Production Flow Chart Questions

Name _____

1. What are the two types of cotton produced in California?
 - a. Upland
 - b. Pima
 - c. Both A & B are correct
 - d. None of the above

2. After the gin where are the bales of clean cotton lint taken?
 - a. Home
 - b. Cottonseed Oil Mill
 - c. Farm
 - d. Textile Mill

3. When does the farmer begin planting the cottonseeds according to the flow chart?
 - a. Winter
 - b. Spring
 - c. Fall
 - d. Summer

4. Leftover cottonseeds are used primarily for two things, what are they?
 - a. To feed to dairy cows and to produce cottonseed oil
 - b. To create clothes
 - c. To replant in the spring months
 - d. To make gauze and money

5. When do the cotton plants grow according to the flow chart?
 - a. Fall
 - b. Spring
 - c. Winter
 - d. Summer

6. What is the last step in Cotton Production Flow Chart?
 - a. To send the cottonseeds to the Cottonseed oil mill
 - b. To deliver the module to the gin
 - c. To take home the products of cotton including oil, clothing, and other byproducts
 - d. To plant the upland and pima cotton seeds

7. At the gin what takes place?
 - a. Cotton is sent through blowers and towers to remove debris and moisture
 - b. The cotton seeds are removed from the cotton lint

- c. The cotton is made into a bale and put on a truck to be sent to the mill
 - d. All of the above processes take place at the gin
8. Which one of these options best lists the steps in the cotton production flow chart?
- a. Harvest, Module, Gin, Cotton Seeds, Cow, Cotton Seed oil
 - b. Farm, Plant Seeds, Growth, Harvest, Gin, Textile Mill, Clothing, Home
 - c. Bale, Mill, Products, Home
 - d. Seeds, Plant, Growth, Harvest
9. When is the cotton harvested according to the flow chart?
- a. Spring
 - b. Summer
 - c. Fall
 - d. Winter
10. The main purpose of this chart is to
- a. Encourage people to become cotton farmers
 - b. Show how cotton travels from a plant to products we use everyday
 - c. Show that cotton seeds can be used for oil
 - d. Encourage children to wear cotton clothing